

Cybersecurity Corner

New cybersecurity updates and information become available every day. In order to keep you best informed we will be covering two topics this month.

Toll Text Scam

You may have recently received a text like the one below saying you owe money for unpaid tolls. This is a phishing scam. Scammers are sending these texts pretending to be toll agencies in order to steal money or personal information. Don't click any links or respond to the text message. To check if you have unpaid tolls reach out to the state tolling agency using a phone number or website you know is real. Use your phone's junk tool to report the text message and delete it.

Hegseth orders suspension of Pentagon's offensive cyberoperations against Russia

Regulatory and cybersecurity standards are constantly changing. Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth has paused offensive cyberoperations against Russia by U.S. Cyber Command, rolling back some efforts to contend with a key adversary even as national security experts call for the U.S. to expand those capabilities. The Trump administration has also rolled back other efforts at the FBI and other agencies related to countering digital and cyber threats. This means we will most likely see more cyberattacks on institutions and businesses, and in turn individuals. Speak with your financial advisor about ways to best protect yourself against cybersecurity attacks.
